Teenage Love chronicles moments of my experience around Teenage love, which explores the diverse trials and triumphs typically associated with becoming a mother during adolescence. By having a son by the age of seventeen years, spoiled my dreams of playing basketball, softball, and going to a college of my choice. As time passed I divided my time between raising my son and navigating through my own dreams for the future. In Teenage Love I recount impressions of a move to Georgia and my mother's passing. Teenage Love is designed to mark phases of my own journey as well as to enlighten and motivate the reader who may be following a similar path.
